

Cheney 20002 Staff Impression

Cheney stands at 5'11" with the kind of serious expression. He has dark brown fringe that falls just above his earlobes in a perfectly straight cut. His wideset round eyes are paired with full, arched eyebrows that give him the air of someone who can hold a secret. His long, straight nose leads to a rounded bulb at the tip, giving him just the right amount of character, like a detective in a noir film who's seen it all. And then there's the mustache—oh, the mustache. Perfectly placed, effortlessly cool, like it was always meant to be there, as much a part of him as his well-defined cupid's bow. His upper lip is small but structured, while his fuller bottom lip adds balance, like the perfect blend of seriousness and charm.

Cheney is a professional musician with a deep love for dance music, he lives for the rhythm of disco beats and the pulse of a packed dance floor. Whether he's behind an instrument or curating the perfect playlist, he's all about making people move. Despite his connection to high-energy music, Cheney is more of a calm presence in everyday life. He meditates regularly. He's also a dedicated runner, lacing up for 5Ks with the same quiet determination he brings to his music—focused, steady, and always in sync with his own rhythm. While he's reserved, Cheney is deeply empathetic, the person who listens intently and somehow just gets people. He has an incredible ability to read a room, making him both a great musician and an even better friend. Just don't invite him to a horror movie night—he'll be out of there faster than a disco beat drops. Give him a well-crafted melody, a good conversation, and maybe a scenic running trail, and he's in his happy place.