

Ingersoll 13144 Staff Impression

Ingersoll stands at 5'10", with an average build. His dark brown hair, thick and slightly wild, has a habit of falling into his face, only to be swept back with a casual motion of his hand—a gesture so natural it feels like part of who he is. His light blue eyes are unforgettable, clear, and piercing and they light up even more against his vibrant, healthy skin. There's a quiet strength in the sharp line of his jaw, but it's softened by the kindness in his smile. His straight nose, with just the faintest upturn, makes him memorable.

Ingersoll is a man of layered interests and quiet determination. Currently pursuing an eventual PhD in psychology, he balances his academic aspirations with the physical demands of his work in landscaping, where he finds satisfaction in shaping the world around him. Books are his chosen escape, transporting him to far-off places and deeper understandings, feeding his ever-curious mind. Meditation is his anchor, helping him maintain a relaxed and centered demeanor, even when life grows hectic. His personality is marked by a calm curiosity—a natural openness to new ideas and experiences. When he's not studying or working, Ingersoll finds joy in strumming his guitar, letting the melodies flow without pressure or expectation. It's a hobby that mirrors his approach to life: thoughtful, unhurried, and full of quiet passion.