

Cedro 18176 Staff Impression

Cedro is a 5'7" guy with an athletic build that speaks more to functional strength than showy muscles. His brown hair naturally falls to the right with an effortless, lived-in quality that looks good without trying too hard. When you talk with him, his round blue eyes give you their full attention with a calm interest that makes conversations feel genuine. His features have a gentle sharpness to them—a slightly flared, semi-pointed nose and just enough facial scruff to add character. When he smiles, it's understated but confident, like someone comfortable in his own skin. The small piercing in his left ear is easy to miss at first glance, but it's a subtle hint that there's more to him than what's immediately apparent.

Behind the wheel of massive locomotives, Cedro works as a full-time engineer with steady hands and clear judgment. But his life extends far beyond the railway. As a former professional soccer player, he still carries himself with athletic grace and discipline, now directing that energy toward kite surfing on breezy weekends and working as a certified rescue scuba diver. Not satisfied with mastering just land and sea, he's currently working toward his pilot's license to conquer the skies as well. Through it all, Cedro maintains a remarkable composure under pressure, driven by natural curiosity and a spirit that craves motion and new challenges rather than stillness.
